Boundaries Scenario’s

1) Someone who has disclosed an experience of sexual violence to you recently is walking towards you in a very busy space on campus.

2) You are at a party. Your friends start discussing a rape case that rumours were spreading around college about. They say they think she is making it up. You know the student and what happened.

3) You are offered an expensive watch by a student who wants to say that you for the support you provided them while dealing with their sexual assault.

4) You are offered a card and a small bunch of flowers as a thank you from a student you provided support to regarding a sexual assault.

5) A student you referred to counselling comes back to you to say they don’t think their counsellor understands them in the same way you do and the counselling isn’t helping. Can ye meet for a coffee as they feel more comfortable talking to you?

6) A student comes to you for support regarding a sexual assault, the perpetrator is someone that you know very well.
